

Calling all authors!

Are you a local author who has published a book? Would you like to add your book to our collection AND be featured on our website?

The Little Elm Public Library is looking for local, published authors of any genre to help expand our collection. If you would like for the library to consider your work, please email Justin Swink (Reference/Tech Services Librarian) jswink@littleelm.org with the following information:

- Your name and any biographical information you would want featured on our website. Please include the area (city or county) you live so that we can ensure we are supporting our local authors.
- Book title
- Description of your book, including who is the target audience
- Where it can be purchased (online or in a store)
- Any professional websites that have more information about you and/or your work

As the library starts to receive information about authors, we will begin building a showcase on our website, along with featuring your work in our library! If you have any questions, please email Justin at the email address above.
